Nutrition on the Move

The last few years have been an uphill battle for those experiencing food insecurity. With evolving economic constraints, pandemic-era public benefits coming to an end, and cost increases in fuel and groceries, the Food Bank's Mobile Food Pantry is an important outreach effort to improve the lives of rural neighbors who are facing hunger in the Blue Ridge region.

In the last fiscal year (July 2022-June 2023), we distributed 1.16 million pounds of food through this vital program, helping to provide more than 80,000 meals each month. Your support brings needed food and hope to neighbors like "Old Sonny" (pictured above, left) and "Young Sonny" (right).

This pair volunteers at our Mobile Food Pantry distribution in Nelson County. "I like to help people. If I got something and I can't use it, I'll share it with somebody else," Young Sonny told us.

Thanks to your generosity, the Food Bank continues to provide guests with healthy food when funds for groceries get tight, meeting them in a location that is convenient.

When asked how the food he receives helps him, Young Sonny responded: "Me and my wife are both on fixed incomes, so I get this food here and it helps a whole lot."
